

TiGRE is a multidisciplinary research project which aims to investigate the role of trust in European regulatory governance.

TiGRE has the ambition to explore trust relationships among a variety of actors at different levels of governance such as regional, national and European and in three sectors: Food Safety, Finance and Communication & Data protection.

This interdisciplinary project benefits from the expertise of nine top-level universities and research centres from nine different countries, bringing together a broad range of theoretical and methodological skills.

The ultimate goal of TiGRE is to open new research directions connecting research and practice to improve trust in governance and the quality of democracy.

This project has received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under grant agreement No 870722 (TiGRE).
